

June is Rose Month

Rose month is in bloom so why not acquaint yourself with all their hidden meanings? Roses are often a sign of love and affection. They're given as anniversary presents, on first dates, Mother's Day, birthdays, and of course Valentine's Day. Whether a single or an entire bouquet, roses can go far if love is your desired message.

Bright and beautiful colors have been bred into these flowers by professional rose breeders seeking unique colors and blends in addition to traditional red, yellow, pink, and white. Now you can choose ivory, green, orange, purple and multi-color roses, to name a few.

The meaning of roses is typically, "I love you," or "You're special to me." Yet some colors hold a much deeper meaning. For example, red roses often mean love and romance, but they can also signify courage, respect, passion, and serve as a sign of praise or congratulations.

A dark red rose can be a symbol of beauty. White can be viewed as joy, purity or innocence. They can also signify reverence or humility, marriage, spirituality, and new beginnings, or be a symbol of secrecy.

Pink roses are a great way of saying, "Thank you!" They are often used to convey grace, admiration, and appreciation. This can be said for any shade of pink but light pink, specifically, can be a symbol of sympathy.

Purple roses, though not as natural as their red and pink cousins, are also as symbolic and enchanting. While, red and pink have other meanings along with the famous notion of love, purple only signifies love and an eagerness to maintain or even improve a relationship.

The gift of an orange rose could show enthusiasm for the recipient or passion in general. Green is a great way of saying, "I hope you're doing well." They offer high spirits, bursting energy, and long life.

Yellow is commonly associated with friendship ... The list of potential meanings for rose colors is endless. Know this. Not every rose tone is the best way to show someone you love them. After all, a black rose signifies death and a blue one conveys the recipient is unattainable or hard to please.

It's an 80-20 World!

20 percent
of your activities will account for 80 percent of your results.

The 80-20 rule is most often referenced in the business world. Consider, 80 percent of sales often come from 20 percent of a business' customer base, or newspapers adhering to an 80:20 percent content to advertising ratio. However, the 80-20 rule has a place in our daily lives as individuals.

According to Wikipedia, the 80-20 rule is "named after Italian economist Vilfredo Pareto, who observed that 80% of income in Italy was received by 20% of the Italian population." At its base, the rule simply means that most results are attributed to a small number of inputs.

Do you realize that 20 percent of what we do in our daily lives is responsible for 80 percent of the rest of our life? For example, 80 percent of happiness comes from 20 percent of everything we do, and about 20 percent of our time is responsible for 80 percent of our income. Consider, there are 168 hours in a week, and the average work week is 40 hours – 23 percent. That ratio could be higher or lower on an individual basis; however, more time is spent not working than working.

In his book, 'Living the 80/20 Way: Work Less, Worry Less, Succeed More, Enjoy More,' Richard Koch shares how we can gain more in the key areas of life by focusing better on that 20 percent of our life. It is a curious concept, and one that you may want to dive deeper into, especially if you are looking to live with less stress, more happiness and greater success.
